M: Hey Janet. How's your sister? I haven't seen her at school for a few days.

W: Hi Eric. She's been sick in bed all week.

M: Oh no! That's too bad. Does that mean she will miss Tom's party?

W: Yes, I don't think she will be better by the weekend.

Question: Where is the woman's sister now?

[2]

W: The leaves of this plant are all yellow. I don't know what the problem is.

M: Hmm. It's by the window, so it's getting enough sun.

W: The soil looks very wet. Do you think it's too much water?

M: Yes, that's probably what's wrong .

Question: What should the woman do with the plant?

[3]

W: This is Pop-Up Pizza. How can I help you?

M: Hello, I'd like to order a large margherita pizza, please.

W: Pick-up or delivery?

M: Pick-up.

W: Okay. Your order will be ready in 15 minutes.

Question: What will the man do?

[4]

M: Hello?

W: Michael, where are you? You told me that you would be home for 6.

M: Sorry, Annie. I'm still at work.

W: Really? Dinner is already on the table.

M: You can go ahead and eat without me.

M: Is this bus 510? I want to go to The Koala Sanctuary.

W: It is, but you need to take bus 430. That's over there, at Stand C.

Question: What should the man do?

[5]

A. Take bus 510.

B. Take bus 530.

C. Take bus 430.

D. Take bus 413.

[Monologue]

Last summer, a Japanese student did a homestay with my family in Chicago. A 15-year-old girl named "Ayuna" stayed with us for 10 days. On the first day Ayuna came, she walked into the house with her shoes on. We were a little shocked. We had expected her to take her shoes off, like in Japan. I said: "Ayuna, please put your shoes by the front door." She said: "Oh! I'm sorry. I heard that Americans wear their shoes inside the house." I explained to her that some people do that, but some people do not. It depends on the family. In my family, we always leave our shoes by the door. I told her: "When you go to a house for the first time here, you should ask if you have to take off your shoes."

Question 1: How long did Ayuna stay with the host family?

Question 2: What should you do when visiting a house in America?

[1]

A. All summer.

B. 15 years.

C. 10 days.

D. Only the first day.

[2]

A. Put your shoes on at the door.

B. Wear your shoes inside the house.

C. Leave your shoes by the door.

D. Ask if you have to take off your shoes.
